

MATCH STORY

Ormandouis Totty (“Totty”) wasn’t thinking about the possibility of becoming a mentor. However, a friend invited him to a BBBS recruiting event at the Cleveland Metroparks Zoo, and he saw the difference he could make in a young man’s life. They asked “Are you up to the challenge?” and Totty answered “Yes.”

It’s been 11 years since that day, and Totty has had two Littles, brothers Justin and Jamell. Throughout the years, Totty has passed on his values of education and respect to both of them. Both boys are now young men, currently enrolled in college working on technology degrees.

Totty believes that being a good mentor involves being a good listener, being loving, being understanding, being firm, and being consistent. Totty spent many hours with Justin and Jamell practicing these principles, all the while going to Cavs games, Indians games, high school basketball games and track meets, as well as countless movies and dinners. Jamell describes Totty as an inspirational person who is kindhearted and has always been there for him, regardless of the circumstances. Totty is someone that Jamell can depend on and someone he can talk to.

Totty is very proud of both of his Littles, and knows in his heart of hearts that his mentoring and friendship has made a real difference in their lives.
